BANG!

"It is every man for itself."

BANG!

"The end is here"

CRASH!

The man's speech comes to a sudden halt. He turns his fearful eyes towards the intruder that broke down the doors. His eyes rake over the figure, focusing on its broken limbs and bloody maw. The man only watched the creature for a second. The creature stared back, but it didn't freeze.

[[It lunged at him.]]

The entire studio fills with blood curdling screams as flesh is being ripped apart piece by piece. The screaming, mingled with the pleas for the pain to cease, seems to go on forever. Only after a few minutes does everything finally become quiet. The only noise penetrating the silence is the laboured breath of the cameraman who stands frozen in place. The creature rises from its gory feast to focus its bloodshot eyes on him yet he still refuses to move.

The creature hears his erratic breathing, smells the sweat that drips from his brow and sees the life in his eyes. The creature takes only a second to observe and only another to act. It rushes forward, breaking the equipment in its path and pouncing on its terrified prey. The man begs for mercy as the creature rips into his chest and feasts on his organs while breaking the bones that hinder it from tearing into him further. The studio again is filled with the sound of flesh tearing and pleading for mercy. Then the screaming fades until only a piercing silence is left.

The camera never stopped recording. It captured everything. How the creature broke and shattered his ribs; how it mauled his flesh and feasted on him; how the life was bleeding out of his eyes and onto the cold tile. The creature rises again and stills, with no prey or noise to lead it, it seems to be disoriented by its surroundings. The camera emits static and small bursts of sparks spout out of the wiring.

The creature observes.

[[It pounces.]]
